Yeſterday Morning the Duke of Orleans went to a General Court of the India Company, of which his Royal Highneſs is Governour, accompanied by the Duke of Bourbon who is Sub-Governour. His Royal Highneſs acquainted the Court, that the King had confirmed to the Company the ſole Privilege of importing Tobacco and Coffee and vending it in the Kingdom, excluſive of all other Perſons. Among the Proprietors of Stock in the ſaid Company, there appeared on this Occaſion the Dukes of Vendome, de la Force, and de Chaulnes; the Marſhal d'Etrees, and the Marqueſſes de Bully, and de Saſſe. The Duke of Orleans was attended by a Detachment of the Life-Guards and of the Swiſs-Guards.

Dublin, September 5.

This Day his Grace Charles Duke of Grafton, Lord Lieutenant of this Kingdom, went in the uſual State to the Houſe of Peers, and being attended there by the Commons, made the following Speech to both Houſes.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I am fully perſwaded from the Experience I have of your unſhaken Loyalty and Fidelity to His Majeſty's Perſon and Government, that I meet you with Hearts full of Joy for the timely Diſcovery of a moſt dangerous Conſpiracy lately formed and carried on by inveterate Enemies to our Religion and Liberty, in order to ſubvert the happy Conſtitution of theſe Kingdoms. As the Providence of God has been moſt conſpicuous in this Event, ſo the inceſſant Care of His Majeſty for the Good of His Subjects, and the vigilant Endeavours of His Miniſters, were moſt ſeaſonably exerted in that Juncture for the Preſervation of all that is dear and valuable to us. Your Duty to the King, your Love of your Country, and your juſt Deteſtation of ſuch wicked and unnatural Contrivances, will, I am confident, animate you to convince the World how ſenſible you are of the many Bleſſings you enjoy under a Prince whoſe Juſtice is duly tempered with Mercy, and who makes the Laws the only Rule of His Government. I am on His Majeſty's Part to aſſure you by His Royal Commands, that the Proſperity of this Nation, both in Church and State, ſhall always be His peculiar Care, and that He has nothing more at Heart, than to make you a happy Proteſtant People.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

You cannot but be ſenſible that the neceſſary Means uſed for preſerving you from two dreadful Evils that lately threatned his Majeſty's Dominions, Rebellion and the Plague, muſt have occaſioned an extraordinary Expence, as well as ſome Interruption to your Trade and Commerce; however, I have the Satisfaction to obſerve to you, that ſuch has been the Frugality of thoſe entruſted with the Adminiſtration of Affairs, that (notwithſtanding thoſe Exceedings) there appears to me no Occaſion to burthen the Nation on that Account with any new Taxes.

The traiterous Projects that were near ripe for Execution the laſt Year, made it adviſeable to call for Six Regiments of Foot from Ireland, and as the Scene of Blood and Confuſion that was then opening in Great Britain, muſt ſoon have reached this Country. His Majeſty could not more effectually ſhew His tender Regard for His Subjects, than than by ordering that ſeaſonable Reinforcement for ſecuring Peace in that Part of His Dominions. The impending Danger was no ſooner by God's Bleſſing averted, but His Majeſty, upon the ſame Motive, cauſed that Body of Troops to return into this Kingdom

I have directed the proper Officers to make up and prepare the ſeveral Accompts and Eſtimates in order to be laid before you; and I have nothing in Command from His Majeſty to ask, but ſuch neceſſary Supplies as may ſupport the Eſtabliſhment and ſecure the Tranquility of the Kingdom.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I make no doubt but you will improve this Opportunity of our Meeting, by preparing Heads for ſuch Laws as you ſhall judge to be yet wanting for the Good of the Publick. I would particularly recommend to your Conſideration the finding out ſome Method for the better Employing the Poor.

I cannot but think it a Matter deſerving your ſerious Attention to provide ſome Laws for the further ſtrengthning the Proteſtant Intereſt of this Kingdom, particularly for preventing more effectually the eluding of thoſe in Being againſt Popiſh Prieſts, it being too Notorious that the Number of ſuch is of late greatly encreaſed.

As for my own Part, I think myſelf obliged to promote upon all Occaſions the Welfare and Proſperity of this Country. There is no good Office I ſhall not rejoyce to do for you, and I hope my earneſt Endeavours to this End will beſt expreſs the grateful Remembrance I have of the many Inſtances of your kind Regards to me when I had the Honour formerly to be ſent by the King amongſt you.

I make no Queſtion, but that I find you ſtill the ſame dutiful Subjects I left you, and you may depend upon me for a faithful Report to His Majeſty of your Behaviour and Affection.
